G . . D . . Am/c . C .
O Bonny Port-more, I am sor-ry to see

. G . . D . . C . . G .
Such a woeful de-struction of your ornament tree

. Am/c . . G . . Am/c . . C .
For it stood on your shore for ma-ny's the long day

. Am/c . . G . . C . Dsus4 D/
Till the long boats from Antrim---- came to float it a-way.

. G . . D . . Am/c . . C .
O Bonny Port-more, you shine where you stand

. G . . D . . C . . G .
And the more I think on you the more I think long

Am/c . G . . Am/c . . C .
If I had you now as I had once be-fore

. Am/c . . G . . C . . Dsus4 D/
All the Lords in Old England---- would not purchase Port-more.

. G . . D . . Am/c . G .
All the Birds in the forest, they bit-ter-ly weep

. G . . D . . C . . G .
Saying "where shall we shelter, where shall we sleep?"

. Am/c . . G . . Am/c . C .
For the Oak and the Ash they are all cutten down

. Am/c . . G . . C . . Dsus4 D/
And the walls of Bonny Portmore---- are all down to the ground.

. G . . D . . Am/c . . C .
O, Bonny Port-more, you shine where you stand

. . G . . D . . C . . G .
And the more I think on you the more I think long

. Am/c . G . . Am/c . . C
For if I had you now as I had once be-fore

. Am/c . . G . . C . . Dsus4 D G/
All the Lords in all of England---- could not purchase Port---more.
